

The Lodge sits on a private ranch comprising 16,000 acres in the incredible Anta Valley in Salta Province. Situated between the towns of Las Lajitas and Joaquin V. González, The lodge is a short drive to the natural roost and fields where more than 100 million eared doves inhabit and live. The climate is dry and warm most of the year, with December and January being the warmest months. The dove population is incredible from March to November, with May, June and July having the best opportunity during the Harvest. It is common to see more than two million doves in the air at the same time! July is also the time of the peanut harvest, when the pigeons are plentiful as well.

The Lodge is a two-hour drive from Salta airport, and offers many different species of wildlife. It is very common to see pumas, hogs, coues deer, and wild emu. Charata, toucan, numerous species of ducks and the beautifully colored loro parrots are a daily sighting at the lodge and the surrounding areas. But dove is the absolute queen of the Anta Valley!
